Catherine Deveny has been a comedian, writer and professional speaker for 23 years. She's the author of seven books, published over 1000 columns with The Age newspaper and is an ABC regular. She has appeared on Q&A five times sitting next to John Elliot, Tony Abbott, Corey Bernardi, Peter Dutton and Archbishop Peter Jenson. Catherine has been named one of the Top 100 Most Influential Melbournians. Her charity and activist work includes public schools, public housing, feminism, atheism, asylum seekers, child abuse in the Catholic Church and homelessness. She is the creator of the enormously successful Gunnas Writing Masterclass. You'll find her performing everywhere from debates at Melbourne Town Hall with Julian Burnside to Splendour in the Grass in Byron Bay.

Associate Professor Gary Richardson is the Director of Oncology Clinics Victoria, Director of Cabrini Academic Haematology & Oncology Services. He is chairman of the Medical Oncology Group of Australia and Director of Clinical Research in Medical Oncology and Haematology, and personally acts as principal investigator in many clinical studies in breast, lung, and gynaecological malignancy. He established the Family Cancer at Cabrini Clinic, the Oncology Service at Cabrini Brighton and the apheresis service. He is published many research papers, abstracts and book chapters. He is Chairman of Foundation 49, a Men's Health Organisation sponsored by Cabrini Health, and is part of the Federal Government advisory board that developed the National Male Health Policy and the Victorian Men's Health and Wellbeing Strategy.

Associate Professor Clare Scott is a Director and Chair of the Research Committee of the Cure Cancer Australia Foundation. A clinician scientist, she treats patients with breast and ovarian cancer at the Royal Melbourne Hospital. She leads an ovarian cancer laboratory at the Walter and Eliza Hall Institute of Medical Research, focused on developing targeted therapies for ovarian cancer to change the current treatment paradigm of "one size fits all" for women with ovarian cancer. In partnership with medical research consumers, Clare explores how we might deal with the ethical and social implications of "big" genomic science and cancer treatments over the next decade.

Dr Ben Tran is a consultant medical oncologist in Melbourne, Australia with appointments at The Royal Melbourne Hospital and Walter and Eliza Hall Institute of Medical Research. He is actively involved in clinical trials and translational research, with special interests in genitourinary cancers, drug development and personalized medicine. Ben is currently the chair of the GU tumour group within Cancer Trials Australia (CTA), and is the deputy chair of the germ cell subcommittee within the Australian and New Zealand Urological and Prostate Trials (ANZUP) Group.

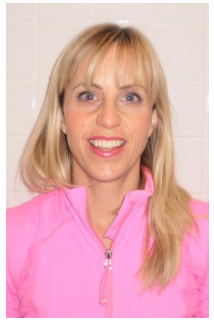
Ms Jane Fletcher runs a specialist psycho-oncology private practice at Cabrini Health and holds adjunct appointments with the Cabrini Monash Psycho-oncology Research Unit and with Monash University. She has a special interest in both prostate and ovarian cancer and has extensive experience dealing with emotional and psycho-sexual issues associated with a cancer diagnosis. She is a member of range of local and national working parties and speaks widely to both community and academic audiences in relation to psycho-oncology.



Ms Debbie Summers is an experienced physiotherapist who has practiced in South Africa, England and Australia. Her work in an oncology ward in London triggered her interest and a greater understanding of in- and out-patient oncology. Debbie trained with Polestar Pilates, an internationally recognised educational organisation and has used Pilates as a highly effective rehabilitation tool in women's health and specifically, osteoporosis. She has been a certified provider of the PINC Program since 2011 and is certified to teach the Next Steps Program ,a progression from the PINC Program. The PINC program has allowed Debbie to combine her knowledge and skills and she is committed to working with her clients to develop a personalised rehabilitation program that meets their short and long term needs.

Dr Chris Goon is an Australian-trained medical doctor, with postgraduate qualifications in Pharmaceutical Medicine and over 8 years in oncology and haematology pharmaceutical industry experience. As Oncology Associate Medical Director, Dr Goon leads the Oncology Medical Department to collaborate with Australian cancer specialists on clinical research, medical education and access for patients in the AstraZeneca core tumor streams of ovarian, lung and breast cancer.
